Questions 4 and 5 are based on the case study presented below. Read the case carefully then answer both questions.

The rural community of Pine Vale was experiencing a severe case of deforestation. The slopes on the south side of the community became bare and the soil became very dry; farmers found it difficult to grow an adequate supply of healthy crops. There were a few trees on the northern end but most of the area was covered with dry shrub. Water was also scarce and during the dry season many residents remained without water for several days. The population of 680 people was concerned about the possibility of a food shortage.

The Ministry of Agriculture hired two researchers to meet with residents to determine the factors they believed caused the deforestation in Pine Vale. At the meeting, questionnaires were distributed to 200 residents.

Among the items on the questionnaire was one which required the respondents to indicate what they believed to be the cause of the deforestation in Pine Vale. Their responses were as follows:

- 40% of the residents believed that charcoal making was the major factor
- 25% said the trees were cut to make wood products
- 20% believed clearing the land for building houses caused the problem
- 10% said trees used for firewood was the main factor
- 5% thought the trees were destroyed by hurricanes

The researchers presented their findings to the Ministry of Agriculture and made some recommendations to address the problem.
