SECTION A: MODULE 1

Answer ONE question only from this section.

Question 1

The extracts below relate to the Spanish conquest in the Americas up to 1550. Study them, then answer questions (a) to (d) that follow.

Document I

...there were more than eight hundred of them, the greater number killed by thrusts, the others by the cannon, muskets and crossbows... Where the horsemen had passed, numbers of them lay dead or groaning from their wounds... The Indians fought all the time like brave warriors, until the horsemen came up.

in Lewis Hanke and Jane M. Rausch, (eds.),
People and Issues in Latin American History: The Colonial Experience 2nd ed.
Princeton: Markus Wiener Publishers, 2000, p.107.*

Document II

Then the Spaniards fired one of their cannons and caused great confusion in the city. The people scattered in every direction; they fled without rhyme or reason; they ran as if they were being pursued... They were all overcome by terror, as if their hearts had fainted.

in Lewis Hanke and Jane M. Rausch, (eds.),
People and Issues in Latin American History: The Colonial Experience, p.115.*

Document III

The fighting at Xoloco and Huitzillan lasted for two days. While the battle was under way, the warriors from Tenochtitlan began to mutiny. They said: "Where are our chiefs? They have fired scarcely a single arrow! Do they think they have fought like men?" Then they seized four of their own leaders and put them to death.

SECTION B: MODULE 2

Answer ONE question only from this section.

Question 4

The extracts below relate to the Haitian Revolution, 1791 – 1804. Study them, then answer questions (a) to (d) that follow.

Document I

There is a motor that powers them and that keeps powering them and that we cannot come to know ... this class of men has neither the energy nor the combination of ideas necessary for the execution of this project ... all have observed an obstinate silence when questioned about who armed them and incited this odious trance...

quoted in Laurent Dubois, A Colony of Citizens:
Revolution and Slave Emancipation in the French Caribbean, 1787 – 1804
Kingston, Jamaica: Ian Randle Publishers, 2004, pp. 109 - 110.*

Document II

[The rebel] had pamphlets printed in France [claiming] the rights of man; in his vest pocket was a large packet of tinder and phosphate and lime. On his chest he had a little sack full of hair, herbs, and bits of bone, which they call a fetish... It was, no doubt, because of this amulet [charm against evil] that our man had the intrepidity which the philosophers call stoicism.

SECTION C: MODULE 3

Answer ONE question only from this section.

Question 7

The extracts below relate to the theme of federation in the British West Indies in the twentieth century. Study them, then answer questions (a) to (c) that follow.

Document I

While I found the opinion of the delegates [of the Associated Chamber of Commerce] unanimously in favour of the continuous and increasing co-operation of the various colonies... I found on the other hand a general reluctance on their part to commit themselves to, or even to discuss any definite scheme of political federation...

Document II

I consider that the aim of British policy should be the development of federation in the Caribbean...

Circular Despatch of Secretary of State to Governors of all West Indian Colonies, 14 March 1945, in F.R. Augier and S.C. Gordon, Sources of West Indian History, p. 291.

Document III

The disparity in size between Jamaica and Trinidad on the one hand, and the eight on the other, was one of the obstacles to smooth working of the defunct West Indies Federation.

Arthur Lewis, The Agony of the Eight, 1965, in F.R. Augier and S.C. Gordon, Sources of West Indian History, p. 295.
