Question 1.

The extracts below relate to the culture of the indigenous American peoples and the arrival of the Spaniards. Study them, then answer Parts (a) to (d) that follow.

Document I

They bear no arms, nor know thereof; for I showed them swords and they grasped them by the blade and cut themselves through ignorance ... Their darts are a kind of rod ... and some have at the end a fish's tooth and others, other things.

Document II

To their god Huitzilopochtli they sacrificed hawks and quail. To Mixcoatl they sacrificed deer, rabbits and cayotes. They made daily offerings of quail to the sun, on which occasions various priests stood at dawn at the temple, with their faces turned toward the east ...

Document III

They ... make voyages of a hundred and fifty leagues at sea, with their numerous canoes, which are a small kind of craft with one mast. Their arms are arrows, in the place of iron weapons, as they have no iron, some of them point their arrows with tortoise-shell, and others make their arrow heads of fish spines, which are naturally barbed like a coarse saw: these prove dangerous weapons to naked people like the Indians, and may inflict severe injury, but to men of our nation are not very formidable.

second voyage, 1494, in F. R. Augier and S. C. Gordon.

SECTION B: MODULE 2

Question 4.

The extracts below relate to chattel slavery in the Caribbean. Study them, then answer Parts (a) to (d) that follow.

Document I

When my master and mistress went from home ... I took in washing, and sold coffee and yams and other provisions to the captains of ships ... for I wanted, by all honest means, to earn money to buy my freedom. Sometimes I bought a hog cheap on board ship and sold it for double the money on shore ...

Document II

Besides the profits arising from their superabundance of provisions, which the better sort of Negroes are able to sell regularly once a week at Savannah La Mar [market], to a considerable amount, they keep a large stock of poultry, and pigs without numbers; which latter cost their owners but little ...

Proprietor, Kept During a Residence in the Island of Jamaica.

Document III

Their mental and physical indolence, in short, their collective intellectual powers that stand at a very low level, allow of the Negroes being endowed with but a few good qualities, among which their unlimited gratitude shines forth as the most brilliant ... [but] their unbounded thirst for revenge ... is very striking. Not only in connection with his physique but also in regard to disposition, a marked difference is shown between the Creole negro and the one brought straight from Africa: the latter is reserved and mischievous, the former is ever cheerful, light-hearted and ready for a joke.

Question 7.

The extracts below relate to the social and economic experiences of the Chinese, Indian and Portuguese immigrants during the indentureship and post-indentureship period. Study them, then answer Parts (a) to (d) that follow.

Document I

... [The Chinese are] a very shrewd, industrious people, and a valuable addition to the community. In some respects they are more valuable than the Coolies; for not only do they rise in the scale of society, but they marry Creole women (no Chinese women, or very few, having been brought with them), and settle down permanently in the country [Trinidad]. They assume the European dress, adopt European manners, and live in very respectable style. Some of the houses are their own property, being elegantly, not to say extravagantly, furnished.

Document II

... before any such marriage is contracted, the parties thereto shall first obtain a Certificate signed by the Protector of Immigrants to the effect that there does not appear from the records of the Immigration Department to be any impediment to the intended marriage, and no marriage shall be deemed to have been duly contracted unless such Certificate has been first obtained.

Document III

... It is no common praise to a race [Portuguese] who came here scarce 10 years ago destitute and penniless, that in many instances, they are now wealthy merchants ... They have turned their industry into every available channel and in every instance with marked success. They have broken down the monopolies and materially cheapened the rate of living, and in that they have benefitted the colony to an incredible extent.
